district attorney and his assistants. They impugn the motives of Rudolph Spreckles, who made the graft prosecution possible. They gloat over the difficulties thrown about the prosecutors by the hosts of thugs hired by the grafters of the Ruef Heney and Detective Burns.

The first thing one of the self-styled "respectable business men" says to the stranger within the gates of the city is: "Well, there are two sides to this graft question." If he is asked to name the two sides, he replies: "Of course, Ruef the men in the conspiracy are business men. and that gang of labor union officials men.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR GIRL

By HELEN ROWLAND. The shortest way to Heaven or to hell is via the love route, limited. It may be bad form for a man to pay his wife compliments, and call her pet names in the presence of other women, but it's awfully good policy. Many a foolish runaway match has been prevented by the fact that a girl didn't have on her best silk stockings at the critical moment. Strange how a man will trust his bosom friends not to flirt with his wife, when he knows perfectly well how he tries to flirt with their wives.

It takes real strength of mind for a man to look disinterested when his wife tells him about the pretty widow who has just moved in next door. What a tyrannical father regards as his "iron will" is just "pig-headed stubbornness," when it comes out of his daughter. A confirmed bachelor girl is one who hasn't married-yet.

"Ah!" said his companion, as he lit his cigar, "you have answered your own question about setting up a god of civilization. The world only worships immortal gods, and civilization is mortal. When it grows so large that it throws a shadow on the immortals, they push it over. That is why there is no god of civilization." Perhaps-yes, I think you are right," he answered rather absently. His gaze had wandered to Veeda and her "Look at the movements of the little black head on the long neck, the quick, darting movements.
